About the property

A picturesque cottage set in the heart of Godshill High Street, this wonderful property is believed to date back to the 1600s. Offered to the market chain free with vacant possession, the property is a stunning piece of island history.

Sit amongst the tea rooms, independent shops and pubs within the village, the property also benefits from off road parking at the rear. The outside space extends much further than you may initially realise with a large level of green space which runs along the High Street onto School Road.

The property is currently commercial, but was private residential property in 2008. The space on the ground floor is shop space split into several areas, there is bags of character including that of an inglenook fireplace. The stairs lead to a landing which provides access to three storage rooms which would have been three bedrooms previously.

There are two large buildings at the rear, the biggest of the two was a commercial kitchen space where the business made artisan chocolate and provided a viewing platform for customers. The other building was previously a café with kitchen space too.
